

1. LET IT SNOW WITH CHARLES & CO

Your 2020 ski trip didn't quite go to plan? Yeah, ours neither! But, whilst the schuss of the slopes fell silent, Beaumier were noisy re-designing their four ski properties situated in the French Alps. Nestled in Val Thorens, Courchevel and Megève, the properties have been transformed at the hands of interior design studio, Charles & Co. The result? A modern, Alpine aesthetic blending textures and colours to create an indulgent, decadent and soothing environment enveloped by fresh mountain air. Reception is waiting for you!

2. STICKS & CREAM BRING NEW REGIME

Herbal wellness brand, Mab & Stoke is bringing together the most powerful, innovative ingredients to create five, new, plant-powered solutions, Mab Sticks and Recovery Cream this month. Both ranges exemplify the brand's evolution as the leading-edge developer of full spectrum plant remedies. With more and more scientific research being conducted into the efficacy of natural remedies in illness, we're all for the power of plants in these never-seen-before potencies.

3. A LITTLE BIT EXTRA WITH DESMOND & DEMPSEY

The new 'Great Indoor' collection brings the outside in because we think the best thing about going out is coming home. Inspired by hot and cold, big and small, outside and in, the joy that is taking hot baths with the window open, breathing warm sun into your cold face, of wet socks as you dash across the lawn to get the paper, cold hands, hot light, cozy corners, steamy tea! And what greater place to capture this feeling than New Zealand. Hand-painted at their London studio, the majestic nature of New Zealand has been translated onto butter soft linen. Live now!

ELON MUSK'S SPACE BILLBOARDS

Space Cowboys or Space Billboards. The latter is "deeply upsetting, wrong and honestly an affront to humanity". According to The Cut, Elon Musk has turned his attention to ruining space; apparently just months away from implementing space billboards. He seems to think ads are far superior to the night's sky than the stars, moon and planets.

UNITED NATION'S CODE RED

A new Climate Change Report has issued a 'Code Red for Humanity', meaning humans are unequivocally to blame for the decades, if not centuries of further climate disruptions due to come. Deadly heat waves and severe storms which we all witnessed this summer will only become worse. One August day this year alone saw 500,000 acres of forest burning in California and ankle-deep water in St. Mark's Square, Venice. The action taken so far IS NOT ENOUGH. Think you're doing your bit by recycling? Think again. Humans 2. Nature 0.

36 MILLION TREES GONE IN THE US ALONE

We all know trees are good. So good in fact that they can lower summertime temperatures by 10 degrees fahrenheit. So why, when the world is literally on fire and space awaits an invasion, are we cutting down trees? A study published last year by the US Forest Service found America lost 36 millions trees annually from urban and rural communities over a five-year period. The consequence? "Cities will become warmer, more polluted and generally more unhealthy for inhabitants," said David Nowak, co-author of the study. Humans 3. Nature 0.
